Further Steps To Boost

DEMANDS ARE GROWING

WASHINGTON, June 14—Government farm experts are reported today to be "seriously considering" further steps to impress on the nation's farmers the urgent need for increased production of pork and dairy products for both this country and Great Britain.

The reports circulated as congress studied President Roosevelt's first report on the leasend program in which he disclosed that $51,884,000 has been allocated for agricultural aid to England, mostly in the form of dairy products and eggs.

With prices of many of the goods in which the government is seeking production boosts at or above "parity," speculation favors action in the form of appeals to farmers by AAA committees, now meeting in Washington, to intensify production efforts along the lines requested by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard early in April.

Wickard announced price supporting measures for greater production of eggs, pork, poultry, and dairy products, and later,
for certain vegetables for processing.

Response Important

Previously, agriculture department officials have publicly expressed satisfaction with the response to the increased production drive. They are reported to hold the private opinion, however, that unless farmers show more effective response, they will be unable to meet both foreign and domestic demands on the "ladder of democracies."

CANADIAN BEAR
KILLS DETROIT
CARNIVAL MAN

DETROIT, June 14—Police today ordered a thorough investigation into the death of Thomas L. Miller, 28-year-old carnival employee, who was slashed fatally by a 450-pound Canadian bear named Teddy.

Miller was attacked when he tried to lead the bear from his cage. He was dead on admittance to Eloise Hospital.

Captain William Callender, of Bay City, who owned the bear, declared he believed that Miller must have "struck or kicked" Teddy.

Callender told officers that Miller had asked him for the "loan of Teddy" to appear in an act in a tavern. Callender said he refused the request.

Fall Of Damascus Believed
Near With Vital Points Held By British

LONDON, June 14—Official British quarters confirmed today that Vichy troops have been evacuated from Kiswe, about 10 miles south of the Syrian capital of Damascus.

British military circles said Vichy troops are now holding positions across a road a few miles from Damascus, while on the central sector of the front the British are holding the town of Nabatieh, closely supported by the RAF.

Contact was stated to have been made with Vichy transport units north of Merj Ayoun and British forces have encountered opposition near Sidon.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: At Vichy a military spokesman declared that Vichy troops had counter-attacked and repulsed Australian forces in the suburbs of Sidon on the Lebanese coast.)

CAIRO, June 14—German aerial intervention in the Syrian hostilities was indicated today in an official Cairo communique which stated three Nazi Junkers div bombers were shot down yesterday afternoon.

Several other Junkers planes were said to have been damaged in air combats with Australian planes over the extreme eastern Mediterranean.

The battles were precipitated when Australian fighter squadrons intercepted two forces of Junkers bombers, including aircraft with Italian markings, that attempted to attack British warships supporting the drive against the Lebanese port of Sidon.

Most competition centered in the race for seats in the Council,

William Reid, Democratic incumbent, and Boyd Horn, 225 Walnut

in the race for mayor, with Mayor

Republican opponent, seeking election.

FIVE MEN HURT
AS EXPLOSIONS
HIT DOCKED SHIP

PHILADELPHIA, June 14—
Five men were injured early today when a series of explosions shattered the Venezuelan oil tanker Caroni, docked at the Gulf Refining
Co. pier at Girard Point.

So violent were the explosions that thousands of South Philadelphia residents were awakened and buildings in the vicinity heavily shaken. Fire did not break out after the explosions.

The Caroni, a 3,164 ton ship, owned by the Mene Grande Oil Co., of Venezuela, arrived in Philadelphia yesterday with a cargo of crude oil. Since her arrival three tank compartments have been unloaded and it was believed that the explosion was caused by vapors in these sections of the ship.

Gulf Refining Co. officials withheld an official statement on the blasts until later this morning.
Ambulances were rushed to the scene to treat the wounded.

The injured men were Luciano
Marino, 28; Antonio Vuleiri, 47;
Ytoito Fundaria, 56; Inger Rolendo, 45; and Golo Antonip Gal-larado, 44, all of whom were believed to be crew members.

Rear Admiral Luetzow Asks
What Would Happen If Ships Meet

BERLIN, June 14—Writing in the weekly publication "Reich," Rear Admiral Luetzow, famous German naval expert, stated today that the United States naval patrol in the Atlantic Ocean represents an "active, war-like act on behalf of Germany's enemies."

Publication of the article followed yesterday's German charge that the American steamer Robin Moor was carrying contraband and a renewed warning that German sea and air forces will continue to destroy war cargoes consigned to British ports, regardless of their origin.

Rear Admiral Luetzow's article dealt with the question of "what will happen when a German auxiliary cruiser meets American patrol ships."

He charged that American quarters are well aware that the American naval patrol is "incompatible" with the duties imposed on a neutral nation by international law.

Efficiency Flayed

Admiral Luetzow deprecated
the efficiency of the Atlantic patrol on grounds it lacked sufficient numbers of suitable ships.
He claimed such a patrol requires even more warships than the convoy system.

"Of course," he wrote, "we expect an impediment to our warfare against British supplies, but

Washington Sees Free Use Of Seas Challenged By German Statement

WASHINGTON, June 14—
Germany's defiant attitude toward the sinking of the American merchantman Robin Moor in the South Atlantic caused considerable concern in State Department quarters today.

American officials who are handling the case were both puzzled and dismayed by the provocative nature of the Berlin statements, especially the implied threats that any other American ship caught carrying contraband is likely to be sunk in the same manner as the Robin Moor.

This attitude on the part of Berlin was seen in official quarters as constituting a virtual challenge to President Roosevelt's recent reassertion of the American doctrine of freedom of the seas.

In view of the unlawful nature of the German submarine commander's action in setting the 46 passengers and crew of the Robin Moor adrift in the South Atlantic without providing for their safety, it was thought Berlin would at least try to pacify the United States by describing the incident as a mistake.

This was the procedure by the imperial German government during the early stages of the first World War when American ships were attacked or sunk. Germany at that time sought to smooth over each incident. It described the various attacks on American ships as "unfortunate accidents" and offered full compensation in almost every case.

RUHR BLASTED AGAIN

Prince Eugen, Companion
Of Bismarck, Believed
In Bombed Port

LONDON, June 14—Hundreds of RAF planes last night reportedly duplicated the previous night's record raid on the Ruhr industrial district of Germany and, according to the Air Ministry today, blasted German warships at Brest.

Many bombs were seen to burst across the dock area in Brest and straddle the berths of the 26,000-ton Nazi battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, also a Hipper class cruiser—believed to be the Prinz Eugen.

The elusive Prinz Eugen was the 10,000-ton companion of the battleship Bismarck in its fatal cruise last week.

Nazi shipping in the channel, and an airbase in Brittany also were attacked. Three British aircraft are missing.

Heavy damage again was reported in the Ruhr and Schwerte industrial districts, where the night before bombs of the heaviest calibre sent explosions and billows of smoke hundreds of feet into the air.

While the RAF planes dropped huge bombs on German targets, Luftwaffe raiders attacking in waves crossed the English coast at several points and delivered a sustained assault on a southeast inland area.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire met the raiders, who dropped bombs that shook the countryside for miles.
Six German raiders were shot down.

Brest Bears Brunt

The Nazi-held French port of Brest bore the brunt of the British attack on the coast. This was believed an indication that the German cruiser Prinz Eugen, which accompanied the battleship
Bismarck on its ill-fated voyage, is still taking refuge there with the battle cruisers Gneisenau and Scharnhorst.

The British night raid on the Ruhr area was believed virtually as heavy as the shattering attack of the previous night.

(Editor's Note: An official German announcement said British planes during the night dropped incendiary and high explosive bombs on western and northwest-

PAY BOOST FOR AVIATION PLANT
TO BE DISCUSSED

LOS ANGELES, June 14—Richard Frankenstein, aircraft division head for the CIO United Auto Workers, said today he and three appointed delegates from the North American Aviation aircraft local would leave for Washington tomorrow to resume wage negotiations before the National Defense Mediation board.

Negotiations were suspended on June 5 when the "wildcat" strike at North American was called, halting production of $200,000,000 worth of defense planes.

The dispute revolved around union demands for a 75 cent per hour minimum wage, a blanket increase of 10 cents an hour and a closed CIO shop.

The strike was abruptly halted
Monday when United States army troops took command of the plant.

Meanwhile, General Ernest D.
Peek, commander of the Ninth Corps Area, inspected the North American plant in the company of Col. Charles E. Branshaw and Col.
J. A. Ladd, commander of the 15th Infantry's 3,000 troopers still on guard at the factory.

"Everything has been handled perfectly," said General Peek.

Union Leader Held

PAUL Martin, above, president of the C.I.O. Die Casting Workers union local at the Cleveland plant of the Aluminum Company of America, was held in Cleveland's Central police station while authorities investigated charges he violated a parole when he left Ohio to appear in Washington before the National Defense Mediation Board studying the three-day strike of Aluminum Company of America workers in Cleveland.
Parole Officer M. J. Hanchin asserted that Martin's real name is Mehringer and that he served seven years of a 10-25-year term in Ohio penitentiary for armed robbery.

M'NUTT TO WIN
CABINET POST?

Fight Over Successor To Jackson More Intense
On Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON, June 14—The New Deal's furious undercover factional contest over President Roosevelt's choice of a new attorney general widened today as friends advanced the name of Federal Security Administrator
Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, for the cabinet post.

A drive by the Frankfurter-Harvard faction of the New Deal to secure the promotion of Solicitor General Francis Biddle, of Pennsylvania, already has been challenged by other administration groups. One faction is supporting Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York, and a third seeks the post for Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, of Connecticut.

Tossing of McNutt's name into this race is believed to lessen the chances of Biddle being promoted to the cabinet, although he has been a secret New Deal "favorite" for the post ever since the vacancy was first anticipated weeks ago. McNutt, long opposed by the Frankfurter crowd, which is now divided over the attorney generalship, has been given two choice appointments by Mr. Roosevelt, despite their opposition.

In 1937, the President named McNutt as Philippine high commissioner without consulting the "brain-trusters." In 1939, the President literally stunned the same group by recalling McNutt and appointing him federal security administrator. Since then,
McNutt has remained high in the President's confidence.

RAIN FOR MONTH TOTALS
SEVEN AND HALF INCHES

After soaking Circleville and Pickaway County with another .62 inches of rain Friday night, the weatherman Saturday promised to turn off his faucets for a little while, but he made no definite statements about what he might have in store for Sunday.

The barometer Saturday was rising slightly, with temperatures beginning at 61 after reaching a high Friday of 81.

The Scioto River stage dropped
1.21 feet Friday night. Saturday the gauge read 5.7 feet and the river still was falling. June's total rainfall neared the 7 1/2 inch mark, with Weatherman Ervin Leist reporting the official measurement at 7.49 inches.

Leistville Crossing
Scene Of Tragedy
Friday Eve

A six months old Circleville boy was killed, his mother was painfully hurt, and a Portsmouth motorist was placed under arrest Friday night after a two-car collision at Leistville, seven miles southeast of Circleville, where Routes 56 and 159 cross.

The victim was James Franklin Black, son of Mr.
and Mrs. Lewis Black of 1041 1/2 East Franklin Street.
The youngster died of a multiple skull fracture en route to Berger Hospital.

The mother, Mary Smallwood
Black, 21, remained in Berger Hospital Saturday suffering from severe cuts about the face and head and numerous body bruises.
Berger Hospital attaches said she was "fair" and that her condition could not be considered critical.
Jinx day, Friday the thirteenth, played a tragic role in the fatality. The child was born in Berger Hospital Friday, December 13, 1940. His death came Friday, June 13, 1941. He was born on the first wedding anniversary of his parents, who were married December 13, 1939.

Patrol To File Charges

State Highway Patrolman J. G.
Edie of the Chillicothe district was to return to Circleville Saturday to file second degree manslaughter charges against Clyde W. Cooper, 26, of 543 Second Street, Portsmouth, driver of the car which collided with Black's Plymouth coupe. Edie said that his investigation with Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputies Bryan Custer and Robert Armstrong, disclosed that Cooper, a State Forestry Division employee, had failed to observe stop signs on Route 159 before he started across Route 56, the main thoroughfare.

Cooper, who was enroute to Portsmouth from Loudonville, expected to waive examination and provide bond for a later appearance before the Pickaway County grand jury. The Portsmouth man is employed in the Chillicothe forestry division, but was driving to Portsmouth after doing some work at Loudonville. He was accompanied by Archie Wheeler of Portsmouth Route 1, a CCC employee, who was being returned to Portsmouth.

Neither Man Injured

Cooper was not injured, while Wheeler, who had a cut on his forehead, did not require hospitalization.

Mr. and Mrs. Black and their son had gone for a short ride Friday evening and were returning to Circleville when the accident happened. It was raining at the time, about 7:45 o'clock, but darkness had not yet fallen. Mr. Black told investigating officers that he slowed down before reaching the crossing and did not see the ap-

Clarence Helvering and Frank A. Lynch, Democratic incumbents, C. O. Leist, North Court Street, Democrat, and Byron Eby, North Court Street, Democrat, will battle for the three Councilman-at-large positions.

William Reid, Democratic incumbent, and Boyd Horn, 225 Walnut Street, have filed on the Democratic slate for Fourth Ward councilman.

The Rev. O. L. Ferguson, 451 East Ohio Street, will be the Republican opponent. The Rev. Mr. Ferguson is pastor of the Circleville Church of Christ in Christian Union.

Julius Helwagen, Second Ward councilman and George Crites, Third Ward, will seek reelection unopposed.

The race for First Ward Councilman will feature J. D. Mason, Democratic incumbent, and George Fissell, North Pickaway Street, Republicans.

Others Unopposed

Other city officials who will seek reelection without opposition are John C. Goeller, president of Council, and Joseph W. Adkins, city solicitor. Both are Democrats.

No last-minute changes came in the race for mayor, with Mayor W. B. Cady, B. H. Gordon, councilman-at-large, and A. J. Lyle, Republican opponent, seeking election.

Charles Kirkpatrick, North Pickaway Street, Republican, was a last-minute filer for the city treasurer position, opposing Democrats Joseph Brink, East Union Street, and John E. Himrod, East Union Street, incumbent. Kirkpatrick was an unsuccessful Republican candidate for Clerk of Courts in the general election last (Continued on Page Eight)

FIVE MEN HURT AS EXPLOSIONS HIT DOCKED SHIP

PHILADELPHIA, June 14—Five men were injured early today when a series of explosions shattered the Venezuelan oil tanker Caroni, docked at the Gulf Refining Co. pier at Girard Point.

So violent were the explosions that thousands of South Philadelphia residents were awakened and buildings in the vicinity heavily shaken. Fire did not break out after the explosions.

The Caroni, a 3,164 ton ship, owned by the Mene Grande Oil Co., of Venezuela, arrived in Philadelphia yesterday with a cargo of crude oil. Since her arrival three tank compartments have been unloaded and it was believed that the explosion was caused by vapors in these sections of the ship.

Gulf Refining Co. officials withheld an official statement on the blasts until later this morning.

Ambulances were rushed to the scene to treat the wounded. The injured men were Luciano Marino, 28; Antonio Vuleiri, 47; Ytolo Fundaria, 56; Inger Rolando, 45; and Golo Antonip Galardo, 44, all of whom were believed to be crew members.

Nazi Naval Expert Hits U. S. Patrol

Rear Admiral Luetzow Asks What Would Happen If Ships Meet

BERLIN, June 14—Writing in the weekly publication "Reich," Rear Admiral Luetzow, famous German naval expert, stated today that the United States naval patrol in the Atlantic Ocean represents an "active, war-like act on behalf of Germany's enemies."

Publication of the article followed yesterday's German charge that the American steamer Robin Moor was carrying contraband and a renewed warning that German sea and air forces will continue to destroy war cargoes consigned to British ports, regardless of their origin.

Rear Admiral Luetzow's article dealt with the question of "what will happen when a German auxiliary cruiser meets American patrol ships."

He charged that American quarters are well aware that the American naval patrol is "incompatible" with the duties imposed on a neutral nation by international law.

Efficiency Flayed

Admiral Luetzow deprecated the efficiency of the Atlantic patrol on grounds it lacked sufficient numbers of suitable ships. He claimed such a patrol requires even more warships than the convoy system.

"Of course," he wrote, "we expect an impediment to our warfare against British supplies, but boastful Anglo-American prophesies (Continued on Page Eight)

DEFIANT REICH STAND FLAYED

Washington Sees Free Use Of Seas Challenged By German Statement

WASHINGTON, June 14—Germany's defiant attitude toward the sinking of the American merchantman Robin Moor in the South Atlantic caused considerable concern in State Department quarters today.

American officials who are handling the case were both puzzled and dismayed by the provocative nature of the Berlin statements, especially the implied threats that any other American ship caught carrying contraband is likely to be sunk in the same manner as the Robin Moor.

This attitude on the part of Berlin was seen in official quarters as constituting a virtual challenge to President Roosevelt's recent reassertion of the American doctrine of freedom of the seas.

In view of the unlawful nature of the German submarine commander's action in setting the 46 passengers and crew of the Robin Moor adrift in the South Atlantic without providing for their safety, it was thought Berlin would at least try to pacify the United States by describing the incident as a mistake.

This was the procedure by the Imperial German government during the early stages of the first World War when American ships were attacked or sunk. Germany at that time sought to smooth over each incident. It described the various attacks on American ships as "unfortunate accidents" and offered full compensation in almost every case.

R. A. F. RAIDERS ATTACK BREST, OTHER REGIONS

German Warships Principal Objectives Of Offensive During Night

RUHR BLASTED AGAIN

Prince Eugen, Companion Of Bismarck, Believed In Bombed Port

LONDON, June 14—Hundreds of RAF planes last night reportedly duplicated the previous night's record raid on the Ruhr industrial district of Germany and, according to the Air Ministry today, blasted German warships at Brest.

Many bombs were seen to burst across the dock area in Brest and straddle the berths of the 26,000-ton Nazi battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, also a Hipper class cruiser—believed to be the Prinz Eugen.

The elusive Prinz Eugen was the 10,000-ton companion of the battleship Bismarck in its fatal cruise last week.

Nazi shipping in the channel, and an airbase in Brittany also were attacked. Three British aircraft are missing.

Heavy damage again was reported in the Ruhr and Schwerte industrial districts, where the night before bombs of the heaviest calibre sent explosions and billows of smoke hundreds of feet into the air.

While the RAF planes dropped huge bombs on German targets, Luftwaffe raiders attacking in waves crossed the English coast at several points and delivered a sustained assault on a southeast inland area.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire met the raiders, who dropped bombs that shook the countryside for miles. Six German raiders were shot down.

Brest Bears Brunt

The Nazi-held French port of Brest bore the brunt of the British attack on the coast. This was believed an indication that the German cruiser Prinz Eugen, which accompanied the battleship Bismarck on its ill-fated voyage, is still taking refuge there with the battle cruisers Gneisenau and Scharnhorst.

The British night raid on the Ruhr area was believed virtually as heavy as the shattering attack of the previous night.

(Editor's Note: An official German announcement said British planes during the night dropped incendiary and high explosive bombs on western and northwest (Continued on Page Eight)

PAY BOOST FOR AVIATION PLANT TO BE DISCUSSED

LOS ANGELES, June 14—Richard Frankenstein, aircraft division head for the CIO United Auto Workers, said today he and three appointed delegates from the North American Aviation aircraft local would leave for Washington tomorrow to resume wage negotiations before the National Defense Mediation board.

Negotiations were suspended on June 5 when the "wildcat" strike at North American was called, halting production of $200,000,000 worth of defense planes.

The dispute revolved around union demands for a 75 cent per hour minimum wage, a blanket increase of 10 cents an hour and a closed CIO shop.

The strike was abruptly halted Monday when United States army troops took command of the plant. Meanwhile, General Ernest D. Peek, commander of the Ninth Corps Area, inspected the North American plant in the company of Col. Charles E. Branshaw and Col. J. A. Ladd, commander of the 15th Infantry's 3,000 troopers still on guard at the factory.

"Everything has been handled perfectly," said General Peek.

PAUL Martin, above, president of the C.I.O. Die Casting Workers union local at the Cleveland plant of the Aluminum Company of America, was held in Cleveland's Central police station while authorities investigated charges he violated a parole when he left Ohio to appear in Washington before the National Defense Mediation Board studying the three-day strike of Aluminum Company of America workers in Cleveland. Parole Officer M. J. Hanchin asserted that Martin's real name is Mehninger and that he served seven years of a 10-25-year term in Ohio penitentiary for armed robbery.

M'NUTT TO WIN CABINET POST?

Fight Over Successor To Jackson More Intense On Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON, June 14—The New Deal's furious undercover factional contest over President Roosevelt's choice of a new attorney general widened today as friends advanced the name of Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, for the cabinet post.

A drive by the Frankfurter-Harvard faction of the New Deal to secure the promotion of Solicitor General Francis Biddle, of Pennsylvania, already has been challenged by other administration groups. One faction is supporting Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York, and a third seeks the post for Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, of Connecticut.

Tossing of McNutt's name into this race is believed to lessen the chances of Biddle being promoted to the cabinet, although he has been a secret New Deal "favorite" for the post ever since the vacancy was first anticipated weeks ago. McNutt, long opposed by the Frankfurter crowd, which is now divided over the attorney generalship, has been given two choice appointments by Mr. Roosevelt, despite their opposition.

In 1937, the President named McNutt as Philippine high commissioner without consulting the "brain-trusters." In 1939, the President literally stunned the same group by recalling McNutt and appointing him federal security administrator. Since then, McNutt has remained high in the President's confidence.

RAIN FOR MONTH TOTALS SEVEN AND HALF INCHES

After soaking Circleville and Pickaway County with another 62 inches of rain Friday night, the weatherman Saturday promised to turn off his faucets for a little while, but he made no definite statements about what he might have in store for Sunday.

The barometer Saturday was rising slightly, an indication of fair weather, with temperatures beginning at 61 after reaching a high Friday of 81.

The Scioto River stage dropped 1.21 feet Friday night. Saturday the gauge read 5.7 feet and the river still was falling. June's total rainfall neared the 7 1/2 inch mark, with Weatherman Ervin Leist reporting the official measurement at 7.49 inches.

European Bulletins

LONDON—The London Daily Express stated in an Ankara dispatch today that 120 German divisions are concentrated along the Soviet frontier from the Baltic to the Black Sea, despite the official Russian denial that Soviet-German tension exists. According to "trustworthy information" in Ankara, the Express said, an estimated 140 Soviet divisions are massed along Russia's German and Romanian borders.

CAIRO—An official RAF communique today credited British planes with reducing a 7,000-ton axis supply ship to a total loss in an aerial attack on a convoy in the Mediterranean. The communique also reported a new axis raid on the Libyan harbor of Benghazi which set two axis vessels afire and further attacks on the airbases at Gazala and Calate in Libya.

NEW YORK—A new contingent of Canadian airmen has just arrived in London, according to a British radio broadcast picked up in New York today by NBC. The fliers were welcomed by the London populace, the broadcast said, and later received by the queen.

LONDON—A prediction that Britain soon would be as safe from night bombing as she now is from daylight aerial attacks was left today by British Labor Minister Ernest Bevin. Speaking last night at Leicester, Bevin also disclosed that British naval vessels had sunk "dozens" of German submarines which suddenly appeared to prey on shipping in the Atlantic.

BERLIN—The high command announced today that a German submarine sank a large British liner in the South Atlantic. Name of the ship sent to the bottom is not yet known.

Lewis Black's Son Dies; Portsmouth Driver Jailed

MOTHER, 21, HURT

Leistville Crossing Scene Of Tragedy Friday Eve

A six months old Circleville boy was killed, his mother was painfully hurt, and a Portsmouth motorist was placed under arrest Friday night after a two-car collision at Leistville, seven miles southeast of Circleville, where Routes 56 and 159 cross.

The victim was James Franklin Black, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Black of 104 1/2 East Franklin Street. The youngster died of a multiple skull fracture en route to Berger Hospital.

The mother, Mary Smallwood Black, 21, remained in Berger Hospital Saturday suffering from severe cuts about the face and head and numerous body bruises. Berger Hospital attaches said she was "fair" and that her condition could not be considered critical.

Jinx day, Friday the thirteenth, played a tragic role in the fatality. The child was born in Berger Hospital Friday, December 13, 1940. His death came Friday, June 13, 1941. He was born on the first wedding anniversary of his parents, who were married December 13, 1939.

Patrol To File Charges

State Highway Patrolman J. G. Edie of the Chillicothe district was to return to Circleville Saturday to file second degree manslaughter charges against Clyde W. Cooper, 26, of 543 Second Street, Portsmouth, driver of the car which collided with Black's Plymouth coupe. Edie said that his investigation with Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputies Bryan Custer and Robert Armstrong, disclosed that Cooper, a State Forestry Division employee, had failed to observe stop signs on Route 159 before he started across Route 56, the main thoroughfare.

Cooper, who was enroute to Portsmouth from Loudonville, expected to waive examination and provide bond for a later appearance before the Pickaway County grand jury. The Portsmouth man is employed in the Chillicothe forestry division, but was driving to Portsmouth after doing some work at Loudonville. He was accompanied by Archie Wheeler of Portsmouth Route 1, a CCC employee, who was being returned to Portsmouth.

Neither Man Injured

Cooper was not injured, while Wheeler, who had a cut on his forehead, did not require hospitalization.

Mr. and Mrs. Black and their son had gone for a short ride Friday evening and were returning to Circleville when the accident happened. It was raining at the time, about 7:45 o'clock, but darkness had not yet fallen. Mr. Black told investigating officers that he slowed down before reaching the crossing and did not see the approaching car.

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, June 14—With a third of the baseball season in the hat bag, and with the deadline on trades set for tomorrow midnight, it is time to take stock of the pennant races.

The most notable development in the American League has been the surprising strength shown at times by Connie Mack's Athletics, a team consigned to the cellar in most of the pre-season dope.

The most startling development in the National League has been the failure—until recently—of the world champion Reds to live up to their reputations.

In recent years we have come to expect tight finishes in the national and runaway affairs in the American due to the overwhelming power of the Yanks.

DUROCHER PUTS BABE PHELPS ON SUSPENDED LIST

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, June 14—The ironic twists that life can take on for a man just when he is about to cash in on the big Babe Phelps today. While the blimp sulked in a Brooklyn hotel room his Brooklyn Dodger teammates were out in the west, specifically in St. Louis, fighting for the National League pennant and a place in the World Series. Off to a bad start in the spring and rapidly getting no better ever since, he probably has personally arranged to keep himself from reaching the baseball players' mecca. Never having been in a World Series he probably will not get into that spotlight this time even if the Dodgers do.

"I'm completely disgusted with Phelps' behavior," Manager Leo Durocher said yesterday when he fined his big catcher $500, suspended him indefinitely and did not deny that the blimp would be traded if anybody would take him. Phelps' difficulties started in the spring when he left his Maryland home for the Dodgers' Havana training camp, and on reaching Miami decided he was too ill to go further, and returned from whence he set out. His excuse was—illness—flu, influenza, chills, or some such. In any case, he did not report for spring training when he was due. And that only added to Manager Durocher's myriad difficulties. Mr. Durocher's Van Lingle Mungo was getting himself suspended and banished to the minors for other rule infractions, so, with one thing and another, the Dodger camp was scarcely all beer and skittles—or not skittles, anyhow.

We can forget Mungo, just as everybody has been doing for years, but Phelps can't be tossed away so lightly considering that he was to be the man who would catch the Dodgers to the pennant, which they may still win even without him.

A holdover from the Casey Stengel regime, he seems to be the last of that hardy breed of Dodger recalcitrants who everlastingly made life a problem and a bitter delusion for the hapless managers of this club.

Dykes, Staff Hailed as "Miracle Men" for Sox Showing

With Few Exceptions, Chicago Is Team Of Castoffs Made Stars By Manager, Aides

Joe Kuhel... Nationals

Bill Dietrich Athletics

Taft Wright... Nationals

Thornton Lee... Indians

Edgar Smith... Athletics

Myril Hoag... Yankees

WELL, what about the White Sox? Is Jimmy Dykes a miracle man? Naturally luck plays a part, but Dykes and his staff, especially Muddy Ruel, must be given a large share of the credit for the White Sox' amazing showing in the American League race for no better bunch of castoffs ever has been assembled into a first-division club. The Sox, remember, went into the No. 1 spot for a day on June 1.

Pitching wins ball games. And the Sox are getting pitching, plenty of good pitching. And they're getting it from pitchers that didn't click with other teams.

Checking up on the Sox as a team, we come to the amazing discovery that only five players regulars, are dyed-in-the-wool Chicago players. Not home-town boys, but players who have spent their major league careers with the Pale Hose and no other club. The rest, and that accounts for 20 players, including rookies, have been cast off by other clubs as excess baggage or trading material and have developed into star ranking with the Sox.

Smith From A's

Take the regular pitching staff first. Well, Ted Lyons has been with the Sox for 16 years, ever since he hopped off the campus at Baylor University. Johnny Rigney came to the Sox in 1935 and with some minor league experience, has been with 'em ever since.

But for the rest, Thornton Lee, Bill Dietrich and Edgar Smith, they are all castoffs from other clubs.

Dietrich, no-hit star, was with the Philadelphia Athletics for three years and then was sold to Washington before the Sox picked him up.

Thornton Lee, ace left-hander was a member of the Cleveland Indians for four years before being traded to the Sox in 1936. Edgar Smith, portly right-hander, was with the Athletics for three years before Chicago got him for the waiver price. Pete Appleton was a Cleveland and Washington pitcher before the Sox grabbed him for relief roles. Buck Ross was picked up from the Athletics.

In the infield, Billy Knickerbocker starred for several years with the Cleveland Indians and the New York Yankees before the Sox acquired him in a trade with the Yankees this last winter. Appling always has been a Sox fixture. Dario Lodigiani was discarded by the Athletics and sent to the minors. The Sox got him in a trade. Joe Kuhel spent eight years with the Washington Senators before being traded to the Sox for Zeke Bonura in 1938. Bob Kennedy was a Sox rookie last year. Don Kolloway came up this season.

Wright From Nats

Behind the plate the White Sox have Skeets Dickey as a substitute receiver. He once was the property of the Boston Red Sox.

In the outfield, Taft Wright was acquired in a trade with Washington in 1939. Gerald Walker, now with the Indians, was the bait. Julius Solters was a St. Louis star for two years until Cleveland got him. The Indians released him on waivers to the Browns in 1939, whereupon he was traded to the White Sox for Rip Radcliff. Myril Hoag spent seven years with the Yankees and two with the Browns before the Sox got him this season. Ben Chapman, recently picked up, has been with the Yankees, Washington, Boston and the Indians. Mike Kreivich, while a White Sox star for years, once played with the Chicago Cubs.

The Sox are a poor hitting team, only Appling among the regulars hitting over .300, but their pitchers have been able to handuff the opposition and pitch complete games. Some timely swatting in the clutches has helped.

Dykes is now in his eighth year as manager of the Sox. He himself as a veteran of 20 years of play and knows all the answers and how to deal with players.

Last time the Sox won a pennant was in 1919 under Billy Gleason. The Sox previously had won in 1901, then in 1906 and again in 1917. They have finished fourth the last two years.

FOUR UNEARNED RUNS WIN GAME FOR RED BIRDS

COLUMBUS, June 14—Fur is certain to fly in the American Association today when the loop-leading Columbus Red Birds, the team than can capitalize on the breaks, collides with the second-place Kansas City powerhouse in another of the league's dime-a-dozen "crucial series."

The thrifty Red Birds cashed in yesterday on four unearned runs to eke out a 4 to 3 decision over the hapless, last-place Milwaukee Brewers, although three rookie hurlers held the flock to four hits, one of them the scratch variety.

To add insult to injury, Bert Haas, a former Brewer, drove in all four runs—three when his third inning double cleared the paths, and the winning tally in the fifth on a long fly. Johnny Grodzicki was credited with his sixth straight win, although he yielded 10 safeties.

The win increased the Flock's lead to a game and a half, as Kansas City dropped an 11 to 5 tilt to the hot-and-cold Toledo Mud-hens. The Hens pounded four Kaw pitchers for 16 bingles, which, when coupled with six Kaw errors, should be enough to win any ball game.

The weatherman again was the winner of the other two scheduled tilts, with cold weather forcing postponement of the Louisville game at Minneapolis and wet grounds having the same effect on Indianapolis at St. Paul.

BALL HITS PIN, SO PATTY'S FOE LOSES CONTEST

CINCINNATI, June 14—Patty Berg, Minneapolis pro who has been a top-flight golfer for many of her 23 years, and Mrs. Bert Well, 37-year-old Cincinnati housewife who three times also has been Ohio's links queen, battle it out today over 36 rain-swept, soggy fairways to determine who will be the 12th woman ever to wear the Western Open golf crown.

Miss Berg was carried three extra holes in the semi-finals yesterday before she canned a three-foot putt for the birdie which defeated Betty Jameson, San Antonio, Texas, lass who has won the national amateur crown the last two years.

Mrs. Well had a somewhat easier task as she eliminated Mrs. James Platt, of Dayton, O., 3 and 2.

An unlucky break on the 11th hole cost Miss Jameson her chance to enter the finals. As Miss Berg blasted from a trap, her ball flew dead to the pin. Miss Jameson's caddy, at the pin, attempted to lift the flag, but the pin stuck and was struck by the ball.

The referee ruled Miss Jameson's caddy at fault and awarded Miss Berg the hole on a technicality, although Miss Jameson, who was on the green in two, canned a 15-foot putt for a birdie three. Previously, Miss Berg never had been more than even.

The match was the fifth between the two nationally-known stars, with Miss Berg now having a three-to-two edge. Between them yesterday, the pair carried eight birdies and an eagle, the latter by Miss Berg on the second, when her 90-yard second shot holed out.

In contrast, the only birdie in

About This And That In Many Sports

Rain has put a damper on softball competition, golf course activity, and just about every other sport except bowling, with the C.A.C. slides enjoying plenty of play... High school boys and girls who have discovered what bowling is all about in the last few weeks are storming the CAC alleys from morning until late at night, and indications are that a high school intramural league may be conducted next year...

Fate of the CAC alleys is a question... It is rumored that a buyer has been obtained for the entire CAC property and that the alleys will be expanded and moved upstairs to occupy the present basketball court... Other rumors have a group of local men buying the alleys, reconditioning them and putting them in a room up-town... Either would be splendid as far as bowlers are concerned... If the alleys are moved to the basketball court, Circleville's board of education had better get busy to arrange a place for cage play next winter...

Circleville had a visitor last week who has just seen some of the best bowling ever produced... He is Bob Beach, son-in-law of Mrs. H. B. Given, who came here from Milwaukee, Wis., where he is editor of a national bowling magazine... The publication, official voice of the American Bowling Congress, is read wherever bowling is conducted... Bob can understand why bowling has not developed faster in Circleville, but was told by several enthusiasts that things look excellent for the sport starting next fall, regardless of what is done with the local alleys... During the last several months he has been in contact with all the big bowlers of the nation who have been competing in the annual ABC at St. Paul...

Baseball Loops Begin Shaping Up

Play Of Athletics And Failure Of Redlegs To Start Clicking Rated As Outstanding

NEW YORK, June 14—With a third of the baseball season in the hat bag, and with the deadline on trades set for tomorrow midnight, it is time to take stock of the pennant races.

The most notable development in the American League has been the surprising strength shown at times by Connie Mack's Athletics, a team consigned to the cellar in most of the pre-season dope.

The most startling development in the National League has been the failure—until recently—of the world champion Reds to live up to their reputations.

In recent years we have come to expect tight finishes in the national and runaway affairs in the American due to the overwhelming power of the Yanks.

This season the National has been a two-way affair between the Cardinals and Dodgers. But this state of affairs is not likely to last long with the Reds showing signs of coming to life and the Giants, Cubs and Pirates beginning to feel their oats.

Six teams have been battling on fairly even terms in the American and even today, the Mackmen in sixth place after a losing streak, are less than 10 games off the Indians' pace.

The Indians must be accorded to a slight edge as long as Uncle Sam lets Bob Feller pitch. If Uncle Sam should put a draft finger on Bob, the Indians could kiss their pennant hopes goodbye.

DUROCHER PUTS BABE PHELPS ON SUSPENDED LIST

By Lawton Carver
NEW YORK, June 14—The ironic twists that life can take on for a man just when he is about to cash in on the big Babe Phelps today, while the blimp sulks in a Brooklyn hotel room his Brooklyn hotel teammates were out in the west, specifically in St. Louis, fighting for the National League pennant and a place in the World Series. Off to a bad start in the spring and rapidly getting no better ever since, he probably has personally arranged to keep himself from reaching the baseball players' mecca. Never having been in a World Series he probably will not get into that spotlight this time even if the Dodgers do.

"I'm completely disgusted with Phelps' behavior," Manager Leo Durocher said yesterday when he fined his big catcher $500, suspended him indefinitely and did not deny that the blimp would be traded if anybody would take him.

Phelps' difficulties started in the spring when he left his Maryland home for the Dodgers' Havana training camp, and on reaching Miami decided he was too ill to go further, and returned from whence he set out. His excuse was—illness—flu, influenza, chills, or some such. In any case, he did not report for spring training when he was due. And that only added to Manager Durocher's myriad difficulties. Mr. Durocher's Van Lingle Mungo was getting himself suspended and banished to the minors for other rule infractions, so with one thing and another, the Dodger camp was scarcely all beer and skittles—or not skittles, anyhow.

We can forget Mungo, just as everybody has been doing for years, but Phelps can't be tossed away so lightly considering that he was to be the man who would catch the Dodgers to the pennant, which they may still win even without him.

A holdover from the Casey Stengel regime, he seems to be the last of that hardy breed of Dodger recalcitrants who everlastingly made life a problem and a bitter delusion for the hapless managers of this club.

BASEBALL'S HERO AND GOAT

HERO—Max Lanier, Cardinals; who held the Dodgers to four hits enabling the Cardinals to increase their league lead to three games.

GOAT—Whitlow Wyatt, Dodgers; despite his four hit pitching and his own double and single. Wyatt suffered his fourth loss of season at the hands of the Cardinals.

Dykes, Staff Hailed as "Miracle Men" for Sox Showing

Joe Kuhel... Nationals Thornton Lee... Indians Edgar Smith... Athletics Myril Hoag... Yankees

WELL, what about the White Sox? Is Jimmy Dykes a miracle man? Naturally luck plays a part, but Dykes and his staff, especially Muddy Ruel, must be given a large share of the credit for the White Sox' amazing showing in the American League race for no better bunch of castoffs ever has been assembled into a first division club. The Sox, remember, went into the No. 1 spot for a day on June 1.

Pitching wins ball games. And the Sox are getting pitching, plenty of good pitching. And they're getting it from pitchers that didn't click with other teams.

Checking up on the Sox as a team, we come to the amazing discovery that only five players regularly, are dyed-in-the-wool Chicago players. Not home-town boys, but players who have spent their major league careers with the Pale Hose and no other club. The rest, and that accounts for 20 players, including rookies, have been cast off by other clubs as excess baggage or trading material and have developed into star ranking with the Sox.

Smith From A's
Take the regular pitching staff first. Well, Ted Lyons has been with the Sox for 16 years, ever since he hopped off the campus at Baylor University. Johnny Rigney came to the Sox in 1935 and with some minor league experience, has been with 'em ever since.

Wright From Nats
Behind the plate the White Sox have Skeets Dickey as a substitute receiver. He once was the property of the Boston Red Sox.

In the outfield, Taft Wright was acquired in a trade with Washington in 1939. Gerald Walker, now with the Indians, was the bait. Julius Solters was a St. Louis star for two years until Cleveland got him. The Indians released him on waivers to the Browns in 1939, whereupon he was traded to the White Sox for Rip Radcliff. Myril Hoag spent seven years with the Yankees and two with the Browns before the Sox got him this season. Ben Chapman, recently picked up, has been with the Yankees, Washington, Boston and the Indians. Mike Kreivich, while a White Sox star for years, once played with the Chicago Cubs.

The Sox are a poor hitting team, only applying among the regulars hitting over .300, but their pitchers have been able to handcuff the opposition and pitch complete games. Some timely swatting in the clutches has helped.

Dykes is now in his eighth year as manager of the Sox. He himself as a veteran of 20 years of play and knows all the answers and how to deal with players.

Last time the Sox won a pennant was in 1919 under Billy Gleason. The Sox previously had won in 1901, then in 1906 and again in 1917. They have finished fourth the last two years.

SWIFT TO MONTREAL
ST. LOUIS, June 14—Pitcher Bill Swift today headed for a tour of service with the Montreal Royals following his sale to the International League farm club by the Brooklyn Dodgers. The deal was announced by the Dodgers' Manager Leo Durocher.

HARVARD FAVORED
NEW LONDON, Conn., June 14—The Harvard University crew, huskier and regarded as more powerful than Yale's, was a heavy favorite to win its fifth consecutive regatta and defeat the Elis today in the 79th renewal of the colorful Yale-Harvard rivalry.

RED TO START RIDDLE AGAINST TERRY'S OUTFIT
CINCINNATI, June 14—Third place in the National League was at stake today as Bill Terry brings his New York Giants to Cincinnati to try conclusions with the world champion Reds.

Wily Willie has quite a task cut out for himself, as the Redlegs, not exactly a ball of fire in early season campaigning, have been playing championship caliber in their last dozen or so engagements. The Reds manager, a bit of a mastermind himself known as the good Deacon McKechnie, plans to send Elmer Riddle, who has four wins without a loss, to the mound in an effort to snatch third place from the Terrymen. The latter will counter with his ace, Hal Schumacher, who possesses a 4 and 3 record, to protect and increase the Giants' one-percentage-point lead.

FOUR UNEARNED RUNS WIN GAME FOR RED BIRDS

COLUMBUS, June 14—Fur is certain to fly in the American Association today when the loop-leading Columbus Red Birds, the team than can capitalize on the breaks, collides with the second-place Kansas City powerhouse in another of the league's dime-a-dozen "crucial series."

The thrifty Red Birds cashed in yesterday on four unearned runs to eke out a 4 to 3 decision over the hapless, last-place Milwaukee Brewers, although three rookie hurlers held the flock to four hits, one of them the scratch variety.

To add insult to injury, Bert Haas, a former Brewer, drove in all four runs—three when his third inning double cleared the paths, and the winning tally in the fifth on a long fly. Johnny Grodzicki was credited with his sixth straight win, although he yielded 10 safeties.

The win increased the Flock's lead to a game and a half, as Kansas City dropped an 11 to 5 tilt to the hot-and-cold Toledo Mud-hens. The Hens pounded four Kaw pitchers for 16 bingles, which, when coupled with six Kaw errors, should be enough to win any ball game.

The weatherman again was the winner of the other two scheduled tilts, with cold weather forcing postponement of the Louisville game at Minneapolis and wet grounds having the same effect on Indianapolis at St. Paul.

BALL HITS PIN, SO PATTY'S FOE LOSES CONTEST

CINCINNATI, June 14—Patty Berg, Cincinnati pro who has been a top-flight golfer for many of her 23 years, and Mrs. Bert Well, 37-year-old Cincinnati housewife who three times also has been Ohio's links queen, battle it out today over 36 rain-swept, soggy fairways to determine who will be the 12th woman ever to wear the Western Open golf crown.

Miss Berg was carried three extra holes in the semi-finals yesterday before she canned a three-foot putt for the birdie which defeated Betty Jameson, San Antonio, Texas, lass who has won the national amateur crown the last two years.

Mrs. Well had a somewhat easier task as she eliminated Mrs. James Platt, of Dayton, O., 3 and 2.

An unlucky break on the 11th hole cost Miss Jameson her chance to enter the finals. As Miss Berg blasted from a trap, her ball flew dead to the pin. Miss Jameson's caddy, at the pin, attempted to lift the flag, but the pin stuck and was struck by the ball.

The referee ruled Miss Jameson's caddy at fault and awarded Miss Berg the hole on a technicality, although Miss Jameson, who was on the green in two, canned a 15-foot putt for a birdie three. Previously, Miss Berg never had been more than even.

The match was the fifth between the two nationally-known stars, with Miss Berg now having a three-to-two edge. Between them yesterday, the pair carded eight birdies and an eagle, the latter by Miss Berg on the second, when her 90-yard second shot holed out.

In contrast, the only birdie in the Well-Platt match was when the winner canned a 15-footer on the par three sixteenth.

Scripture—Acts 13:13-14:28; Gal. 3:23-29

By Alfred J. Buescher

When Paul and Barnabas left Paphos where they had converted Sergius Paulus, they went to Antioch in Persidia, where they entered the synagogue on the Sabbath and sat down.

The prophets and rulers of the synagogue invited them, if they had anything to say, to stand up. Paul stood and beckoned and preached the Gospel to those present.

Paul also spoke to great multitudes, both Jews and Gentiles, in the city, but the Jews stirred up devout women and men who threatened them and they left the city.

They went to Iconium, but when they were assaulted, they went on to Lystra, where Paul healed a man who had never walked, because he had faith. (GOLDEN TEXT—Gal. 3:26)

Scripture—Acts 13:13-14:28; Gal. 3:23-29

By Alfred J. Buescher

When Paul and Barnabas left Paphos where they had converted Sergius Paulus, they went to Antioch in Persidia, where they entered the synagogue on the Sabbath and sat down.

The prophets and rulers of the synagogue invited them, if they had anything to say, to stand up. Paul stood and beckoned and preached the Gospel to those present.

Paul also spoke to great multitudes, both Jews and Gentiles, in the city, but the Jews stirred up devout women and men who threatened them and they left the city.

They went to Iconium, but when they were assaulted, they went on to Lystra, where Paul healed a man who had never walked, because he had faith. (GOLDEN TEXT—Gal. 3:26)

DRIVING SUBSTITUTES

AMERICANS have experienced gasless Sundays before and can endure them again if conditions require it. Curtailment of weekend driving now would hit a great many more people than it did in 1917 and 1918 because so many more people own cars today. As cars and roads have been improved, too, people have gone farther from home for their Sunday excursions. They'll be missed by the pop and hot dog stands and by wayside inns that specialize in Sunday dinners.

Many advantages may be counted along with such disappointments, however. There will be fewer traffic accidents over week-ends. American highway fatalities in the first nine months of the year have been more numerous than bombing fatalities in the British Isles. We can stand an improvement in this respect.

Families that usually take to the road for recreation will have to develop other resources at home. That should be a wholesome endeavor. Perhaps there will be more church attendance, more reading aloud, or playing games within the family circle. Bicycling and horseback riding—if you can get to the places where there are horses—will still be available. Not to mention human feet.

AN agreement between the state land commissioner and a local lumber company sets up the first "perpetual forest" in the "sustained yield program" of the state of Washington. The region involved includes forest lands, as well as Indian, private and United States forest areas. In parts of the perpetual forest, where little timber has ever been cut, there are stands of pine trees 150 to 200 years old.

State and national foresters will co-operate in selecting trees for logging. The area will be marked off in circles, and logging operations will be carried on in only one of them at a time. By the time the last area has had its cutting, in 30 to 35 years, the first tract will be ready for logging.

The state will receive the prevailing market price for timber. This means that it will have a steady income from a steadily renewed crop. If Americans had been foresighted enough to handle earlier large-scale lumbering operations according to such a plan, there would not be the

FIRST FRENCH LESSON

WASHINGTON — When world war broke in September, 1939, one plan of the French army was to race down from the Alps onto the plains of Lombardy and wade through Italy. Subsequent events have demonstrated the weakness of the Italian army and the probable ease with which France could have accomplished such an invasion.

But France waited. Reasons for waiting all seemed sound. The British urged caution. French diplomats said Italy would not enter the war. And no one wanted to alienate the Italian people.

Anyway France waited, until—nine months later when Italy stabbed her in the back during her direst need.

At the outbreak of the war, also, General Weygand had a great army in Syria. The Allies talked about using this army in the Balkans. They were going to land it at Salonika, create a second front on which Hitler would have to fight.

But French generals advised caution. Greece and Yugoslavia wouldn't like a second front at Salonika. And Weygand was not quite ready. So France waited, until—Hitler, unworried about fighting on two fronts, polished off France itself, and was quite free to devote his undivided attention to the Near East.

U. S. STUDIES FRENCH

The United States, long a devoted admirer of French culture and French civilization, began early to study and emulate French methods. One notable example was the Far East. In 1937, when Japan invaded China, it was clear that Japan was bent upon domination of the Orient and that the United States might some day have to face her. Also it was quite clear that it was better for the United States to face one country in the Pacific rather than two countries in both the Pacific and the Atlantic simultaneously.

So a plan was devised to starve out the Japanese military machine by cutting off cotton, copper, scrap iron and especially oil, simultaneously mobilizing the peace machinery of the Nine Power Pact and the League of Nations.

All-important factor in this plan was stationing the British fleet at Singapore and the U. S. fleet along the California coast to shut off imports—it being clear that the Japanese fleet, because of tremendous distances, could not cross the Pacific either to Singapore or California without being short of fuel oil and at a serious disadvantage.

President Roosevelt even sent Ambassador Davis to the Brussels Conference to whip up this plan, and told him to go the limit. But the State Department rewrote his speeches and sabotaged every move he made. Roosevelt was off the conquered infection; we have not yet rid the world entirely of any single communicable disease, and some, we have hardly begun to fight.

So runs the introduction to one of the most interesting books that has come to my desk for some time, Plague on Us by Geddes Smith (Commonwealth Fund, 1941). It is also one of the most beautiful examples of press work—printing and binding and format—of the year's production.

Cause of Pestilence

The author's approach to the subject, largely historical, reminds us first of some of man's ideas of the causes of the great epidemics of the past, of the enormous advance that has been made in the understanding of contagious diseases and the strides in prevention, as well as how eternal vigilance is the price of peace, and how occasionally some chinks in the armor of our defense are penetrated.

The oldest idea of the cause of pestilence was something visited on sinners by the angry God; now it is visited on mice and rabbits by men in search of knowledge. Other more natural explanations were "miasma," "corruption of the air," and "cold, moist, watery food." Our own shores have been visited by cholera, yellow fever and many epidemics now unknown. During the famous yellow fever epidemic in Philadelphia in 1793, a congressman said of the doctors "Everything that ought to be called fact is disputed, and all that should be confessed ignorance, is affirmed. All vouch success, none had it."

Science has learned since then. "When the sniffing shop girl turns to her companion in the subway," writes Geddes Smith, "and says, 'Gee, the bug's got me all right,' she is to that extent wiser than Hippocrates. Science knows now that no miasma but polluted water, bad milk, insects and other human spread disease. Most of the old plagues are historical because we control these factors of spread."

But "to understand epidemics is one thing; to control them, another." The human factor often is uncontrollable. Mr. Smith has some fascinating stories illustrating how one's best control occasionally breaks down. There are detective stories: "The Case of the Methodist Ladies," "The Case of the Wading Boys," "The Case of the Lady-like Oysters," "The Case of the Elderly Villagers" (streptococcal sore throat from one village cow), "The Case of the Plumber's Patchwork" (the Chicago amoebic dysentery epidemic).

Oysters Cause Epidemic

The case of the lady-like oysters is typical of many recent typhoid epidemics. Every competent health officer knows about how much typhoid fever to expect in any given season and when in the winter of 1924-1925 in New York and then in Washington cases began to multiply far more rapidly than usual, it was realized something was wrong. In every epidemic there is a peculiar fact and this, skillfully used, is the key to the plot. The peculiar fact in this epidemic was that the victims were women of the right class and age for putting on a pretty frock and dining out at a smart restaurant. Such women like small oysters. The small oysters they ate were found to harbor typhoid bacilli. The only sure safeguard against typhoid fever, even in these days of good public health control, is by individual vaccination.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Reader:—"Does the sun benefit one as much through the clothing as when the bare skin is exposed?"

Answer:—The sun has no effect or real benefit through any kind of clothing.

P. D.:—"Will the use of thyroid tablets have any harmful effects on the system?"

Answer:—They certainly will and should not be taken except under the direction of a physician.

S. C.:—"My son has water blisters on his heels and on his toes. He scratches them and water comes out. They do not heal up. What should he do?"

Answer:—The condition is generally what is called ring worm or athlete's foot. One treatment is to use Whitfield's Ointment which is beneficial to most cases. If that does not help, you should consult a physician.

DEATH AT THE SWITCH

RICHARD HOUGHTON

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER TWENTY

"SKIPPED OUT on us!" Henry gasped at his son, who had invaded their boarder's room. "But why would he do that?"

"Maybe he's a crook. I think he's after Mr. Ives' insurance money!"

"What do you know about Ives' insurance?"

"Nothing. But here's a book all about insurance."

From behind Henry in the hall came the startling "Harumph!" of a man clearing his throat. Henry jumped, and spun around to face a scowling Mr. Jones.

"Do you make a habit of prying into your boarders' affairs?" inquired the big man coldly.

Richard slammed the dresser drawer shut.

Henry stammered. "It was all a mistake! Richard here—ha! ha!—thought you had run out on us without paying your rent, and he..."

"He saw me pay my rent—in advance."

"Aw, gee, it wasn't nothin', Mr. Jones. I came in to ask you about the model trains this morning. You weren't here. I thought..."

"Never mind! Mr. Jones' face was stony and inscrutable again.

"We'll forget the whole thing. And now, if you don't mind, I'd like to talk with your father—alone."

"Yes, sir!" Richard ducked past him out the door.

John Jones turned to Henry as though nothing out of the ordinary had occurred. "I went to the hospital this morning," he reported.

"So-so early?" Henry was flabbergasted.

"I couldn't sleep," explained the big man. There was a worried expression on his face as he sat down on the edge of the bed. "What happened last night didn't fit in with my theory of the case at all. I wanted to know if Spinelli had recovered consciousness and told anything more."

"But you wouldn't be able to see him so early."

"I know. I talked with the detective who stayed with him through the night. Professor Bisbee had nothing to do with the stabbing!"

"W-what?"

Mr. Jones drew a cigar out of his pocket, made as though to light it, then changed his mind and slipped it back. "No. Spinelli was walking away from the lodge last night, he said, when something struck him from behind. He remembers that Professor Bisbee was some distance in front of him, and that he called to Bisbee for help. That's all he does remember."

"Oh-h. Then it was a cry for help. Not a..."

"No, not an accusation."

"They've let the professor out of jail, of course."

"About an hour after the newspaper went to press."

"He'll be as mad as a hornet," said Henry. "He'll sue the police for false arrest."

John Jones sucked his lips doubtfully. "Maybe. But Professor Bisbee has disappeared."

Henry clutched the door handle. "Disappeared? You don't mean—"

"I don't know what to think. My theory is ruined by now."

"What is your theory?"

John shook his head. "Never mind theories. We've got to find Bisbee! From what you told me about his attitude toward the case, I think he knows something the rest of us don't know. He may be in danger!"

"You mean the killer..."

"Obviously there's a maniac loose in this vicinity. Spinelli talked with two much assurance at the meeting last night. The killer, who was at the meeting, too, tried to silence him."

"That's your theory?"

"No, no!" Jones was impatient. "Those are facts—obvious facts. I'm abandoning my theory." He rose. "The police are hunting for the professor. I'd like to join the hunt, too, and I came back here to get you. You know the country."

"M-me?"

"There won't be any danger—I hope."

"How about breakfast first?"

John Jones nodded soberly. "Okay. We may have a long walk ahead of us."

As they descended to the lower floor the boarder added, "Lucky for us the rain has stopped for a time at least."

Mrs. Potter already was putting breakfast dishes on the table. She was using the dining room for breakfast, and Henry noted that she had taken time to brush and groom her hair, and was wearing a fresh house dress. She gave her husband a meaningful look. Her lips were tight. He turned hastily and went back to the bedroom to exchange his slippers for his shoes.

Outside the wind was still blowing, rattling the leaves of the eucalyptus tree against the side of the house. Henry looked distrustfully at the sky. It was dark with heavy clouds. He knew the storm was not over. He put on his boots.

When he went downstairs again he was carrying his felt hat with the wide brim. It would help shed the water if the rain caught them.

"We may be gone most of the morning," Mr. Jones informed the lady of the house as she set a stack of pancakes in front of him on the table.

"Gee, can I go?" asked Richard eagerly.

"You'll go to school!" his father told him sternly.

The boy subsided glumly, but not Mrs. Potter. "You'll catch your death of cold," she told her husband.

"Can't be helped," said Henry. He surprised himself by his sudden forcefulness. Maybe it was the presence of John Jones that gave him courage.

Mrs. Potter frowned. She was about to make another acid comment when her boarder added, "Yes, this may be a very important search. Would it be asking too much of you to put up a lunch for us—just in case we don't get back?"

Mrs. Potter opened her mouth. Then she turned and walked abruptly into the kitchen.

"She puts up a very nice lunch," Henry observed cautiously.

The telephone rang. Richard jumped up to answer it, but John Jones was ahead of him. For a big man he was very quick on his feet.

"Hello," he said into the mouthpiece. "Yes, this is Jones. . . . Oh, you've found him! Where? . . . I see. . . . Mr. Potter can show me how to get there! We'll be right over!"

He hung up the receiver. "Never mind the lunch, Mrs. Potter. They've already found Professor Bisbee."

"Is he all right?" Henry asked.

"He's dead. Shot through the back of the head!"

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

The Daily Herald

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles F. Stewart

LORD BEAVERBROOK is beginning to be regarded in Washington as the Briton with whom American production management of war supplies for John Bull's benefit, will be most closely in contact henceforth while his empire's conflict with the Axis continues raging.

The "Beaver," as they call him, has a new job in Prime Minister Winston Churchill's cabinet. Previously he held the portfolio of aircraft productivity. Inasmuch as Britain, from the first, has clamored for all the planes it could get from this side of the Atlantic, this was an assignment that brought him into very intimate touch with our aviation industry. Now, however, he's taken charge of the British manufacture, and acquisition from us, of every item of military and naval as well as air supplies. In short, London dispatches, he virtually is his nation's economic dictator, and, in effect, Winston Churchill's deputy prime minister.

Winston, it appears, is to direct Britain's actual fighting operations but it will be up to the Beaver to provide army, navy and air corps with the machinery and explosive to fight with. Winston will tell him what's needed and the Beaver's stunt will be to deliver the goods. He'll have to rely on us for a lot of 'em and undoubtedly will holler his head off to us to rush 'em across.

GOOD AT HOLLERING

He's good at hollering, vociferously and persistently. A newspaper publisher, like Navy Secretary Frank Knox, has much in common with Frank's faculty for making himself heard. And, for strenuousness, he bears a strong resemblance to Fiorello H. LaGuardia, who, besides being mayor of New York, is mixed violently into nearly everything else.

Furthermore the Beaver's excellent selection to do business with us Yanks because he's a native Canadian and we and the Canuks are so much alike that his hard to tell some of us apart. That isn't so true of the French Canadians, to be sure, but the Beaver isn't French.

For that matter, Prime Minister Churchill has a strong American strain in his recent ancestry. He's more distinctly English than the Beaver, though, and there's more difference between the English and Yankies than there is between Yankies and Canadians—excepting the French ones.

Winston, it's understood, will continue handling John Bull's diplomacy. That isn't to be the Beaver's function. He isn't notable as a diplomat, anyway—too hard boiled; not soft spoken enough. That isn't material. He's chosen to yell like fury for American war supplies; not to appease us. He can yell alright

In 1937, when Japan invaded China, it was clear that Japan was bent upon domination of the Orient and that the United States might some day have to face her. Also it was quite clear that it was better for the United States to face one country in the Pacific rather than two countries in both the Pacific and the Atlantic simultaneously.

So a plan was devised to starve out the Japanese military machine by cutting off cotton, copper, scrap iron and especially oil, simultaneously mobilizing the peace machinery of the Nine Power Pact and the League of Nations.

All-important factor in this plan was stationing the British fleet at Singapore and the U. S. fleet along the California coast to shut off imports—it being clear that the Japanese fleet, because of tremendous distances, could not cross the Pacific either to Singapore or California without being short of fuel oil and at a serious disadvantage.

President Roosevelt even sent Ambassador Davis to the Brussels Conference to whip up this plan, and told him to go the limit. But the State Department re-wrote his speeches and sabotaged every move he made. Roosevelt was off the

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"If influenza came tomorrow as it came in 1918, could we stop it? Surrounded by war, we are sitting on a powder-keg of disease. It is too soon to boast that we have

So runs the introduction to one of the most interesting books that has come to my desk for some time, Plague on Us by Geddes Smith (Commonwealth Fund, 1941). It is also one of the most beautiful examples of press work—printing and binding and format—of the year's production.

Cause of Pestilence
The author's approach to the subject, largely historical, reminds us first of some of man's ideas of the causes of the great epidemics of the past, of the enormous advance that has been made in the understanding of contagious diseases and the strides in prevention, as well as how eternal vigilance is the price of peace, and how occasionally some chinks in the armor of our defense are penetrated.

The oldest idea of the cause of pestilence was something visited on sinners by the angry God; now it is visited on mice and rabbits by men in search of knowledge. Other more natural explanations were "miasma," "corruption of the air," and "cold, moist, watery food." Our own shores have been visited by cholera, yellow fever and many epidemics now unknown. During the famous yellow fever epidemic in Philadelphia in 1793, a congressman said of the doctors "Everything that ought to be called fact is disputed, and all that should be confessed ignorance is affirmed. All vouch success, none had it."

Science has learned since then. "When the sniffing shop girl turns to her companion in the subway," writes Geddes Smith, "and says, 'Gee, the bug's got me all right,' she is to that extent wiser than Hippocrates. Science knows now that no miasma but polluted water, bad milk, insects and other human spread disease. Most of the old plagues are historical because we control these factors of spread."

But "to understand epidemics is one thing; to control them, another." The human factor often is uncontrollable. Mr. Smith has some fascinating stories illustrating

ing how one's best control occasionally breaks down. There are detective stories: "The Case of the Methodist Ladies," "The Case of the Wading Boys," "The Case of the Lady-like Oysters," "The Case of the Elderly Villagers" (streptococcal sore throat from one village cow), "The Case of the Plumber's Patchwork" (the Chicago amoebic dysentery epidemic).

Oysters Cause Epidemic

The case of the lady-like oysters is typical of many recent typhoid epidemics. Every competent health officer knows about how much typhoid fever to expect in any given season and when in the winter of 1924-1925 in New York and then in Washington cases began to multiply far more rapidly than usual, it was realized something was wrong. In every epidemic there is a peculiar fact and this, skillfully used, is the key to the plot. The peculiar fact in this epidemic was that the victims were women of the right class and age for putting on a pretty frock and dining out at a smart restaurant. Such women like small oysters. The small oysters they ate were found to harbor typhoid bacilli. The only sure safeguard against typhoid fever, even in these days of good public health control, is by individual vaccination.

DEATH AT THE SWITCH

RICHARD HOUGHTON

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER TWENTY

"SKIPPED OUT ON US!" Henry gasped at his son, who had invaded their boarder's room. "But why would he do that?"

"Maybe he's a crook. I think he's after Mr. Ives' insurance money!" "What do you know about Ives' insurance?"

"No-nothing. But here's a book all about insurance." From behind Henry in the hall came the startling "Harumph!" of a man clearing his throat. Henry jumped, and spun around to face a scowling Mr. Jones.

"Do you make a habit of prying into your boarders' affairs?" inquired the big man coldly. Richard alarmed the dresser drawer shut.

Henry stammered. "It was all a m-mistake! Richard here—ha! ha!—thought you had run out on us without paying your rent, and he—"

"He saw me pay my rent—in advance." "Aw, gee, it wasn't nothin', Mr. Jones. I came in to ask you about the model trains this morning. You weren't here. I thought—"

"Never mind!" Mr. Jones' face was stony and inscrutable again. "We'll forget the whole thing. And now, if you don't mind, I'd like to talk with your father—alone."

"Yes, sir!" Richard ducked past him out the door. John Jones turned to Henry as though nothing out of the ordinary had occurred. "I went to the hospital this morning," he reported.

"So-so early?" Henry was flabbergasted. "I couldn't sleep," explained the big man. There was a worried expression on his face as he sat down on the edge of the bed. "What happened last night didn't fit in with my theory of the case at all. I wanted to know if Spinelli had recovered consciousness and told anything more."

"But you wouldn't be able to see him so early?" "I know. I talked with the detective who stayed with him through the night. Professor Bisbee had nothing to do with the stabbing!" "W-w-hat?"

Mr. Jones drew a cigar out of his pocket, made as though to light it, then changed his mind and slipped it back. "No. Spinelli was walking away from the lodge last night, he said, when something struck him from behind. He remembers that Professor Bisbee was some distance in front of him, and that he called to Bisbee for help. That's all he does remember."

"Oh-h. Then it was a cry for help. Not a . . ."

"No, not an accusation." "They've let the professor out of jail, of course."

"About an hour after the newspaper went to press."

"He'll be as mad as a hornet," said Henry. "He'll sue the police for false arrest."

John Jones sucked his lips doubtfully. "Maybe. But Professor Bisbee has disappeared."

Henry clutched the door handle. "Disappeared? You don't mean—"

"I don't know what to think. My theory is ruined by now."

"What is your theory?" Jones shook his head. "Never mind theories. We've got to find Bisbee! From what you told me about his attitude toward the case, I think he knows something the rest of us don't know. He may be in danger!"

"You mean the killer . . ."

"Obviously there's a maniac loose in this vicinity. Spinelli talked with two much assurance at the meeting last night. The killer, who was at the meeting, too, tried to silence him."

"That's your theory?" "No, no!" Jones was impatient. "Those are facts—obvious facts. I'm abandoning my theory." He rose. "The police are hunting for the professor. I'd like to join the hunt, too, and I came back here to get you. You know the country."

"M-me?" "There won't be any danger—I hope."

"How about b-breakfast first?" John Jones nodded soberly. "Okay. We may have a long walk ahead of us."

As they descended to the lower floor the boarder added, "Lucky for us the rain has stopped for a time at least."

Mrs. Potter already was putting breakfast dishes on the table. She was using the dining room for breakfast, and Henry noted that she had taken time to brush and groom her hair, and was wearing a fresh house dress. She gave her husband a meaningful look. Her lips were tight. He turned hastily and went back to the bedroom to exchange his slippers for his shoes.

Outside the wind was still blowing, rattling the leaves of the eucalyptus tree against the side of the house. Henry looked distrustfully at the sky. It was dark with heavy clouds. He knew the storm was not over. He put on his boots.

When he went downstairs again he was carrying his felt hat with the wide brim. It would help shed the water if the rain caught them.

"We may be gone most of the morning," Mr. Jones informed the lady of the house as she set a stack of pancakes in front of him on the table.

"Gee, can I go?" asked Richard eagerly.

"You'll go to school!" his father told him sternly.

The boy subsided glumly, but not Mrs. Potter. "You'll catch your death of cold," she told her husband.

"Can't be helped," said Henry. He surprised himself by his sudden forthrightness. Maybe it was the presence of John Jones that gave him courage.

Mrs. Potter frowned. She was about to make another acid comment when her boarder added, "Yes, this may be a very important search. Would it be asking too much of you to put up a lunch for us—just in case we don't get back?"

Mrs. Potter opened her mouth. Then she turned and walked abruptly into the kitchen.

"She puts up a very nice lunch," Henry observed cautiously.

The telephone rang. Richard jumped up to answer it, but John Jones was ahead of him. For a big man he was very quick on his feet.

"Hello," he said into the mouthpiece. "Yes, this is Jones. . . . Oh, you've found him? Where? . . . I see. . . . Mr. Potter can show me how to get there! We'll be right over!"

"Is he all right?" Henry asked. "He's dead. Shot through the back of the head!"

The
WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
The Daily Herald

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles F. Stewart

LORD BEAVERBROOK is beginning to be regarded in Washington as the Briton with whom American production management of war supplies for John Bull's benefit, will be most closely in contact henceforth while his empire's conflict with the Axis continues raging.

The "Beaver," as they call him, has a new job in Prime Minister Winston Churchill's cabinet. Previously he held the portfolio of aircraft productivity. Inasmuch as Britain, from the first, has clamored for all the planes it could get from this side of the Atlantic, this was an assignment that brought him into very intimate touch with our aviation industry. Now, however, he's taken charge of the British manufacture, and acquisition from us, of every item of military and naval as well as air supplies. In short, London dispatches he virtually is his nation's economic dictator, and, in effect, Winston Churchill's deputy prime minister.

Winston, it appears, is to direct Britain's actual fighting operations but it will be up to the Beaver to provide army, navy and air corps with the machinery and explosive to fight with. Winston will tell him what's needed and the Beaver's stunt will be to deliver the goods. He'll have to rely on us for a lot of 'em and undoubtedly will holler his head off to us to rush 'em across.

GOOD AT HOLLERING

He's good at hollering, vociferously and persistently. A newspaper publisher, like Navy Secretary Frank Knox, he has much in common with Frank's faculty for making himself heard. And, for strenuousness, he bears a strong resemblance to Fiorello H. LaGuardia, who, besides being mayor of New York, is mixed violently into nearly everything else.

Furthermore the Beaver's excellent selection to do business with us Yanks because he's a native Canadian and we and the Canucks are so much alike that it's hard to tell some of us apart. That isn't so true of the French Canadians, to be sure, but the Beaver isn't French.

For that matter, Prime Minister Churchill has a strong American strain in his recent ancestry. He's more distinctly English than the Beaver, though, and there's more difference between the English and Yankees than there is between Yankees and Canadians—excepting the French ones.

Winston, it's understood, will continue handling John Bull's diplomacy. That isn't to be the Beaver's function. He isn't notable as a diplomat, anyway—too hard boiled; not soft spoken enough. That isn't material. He's chosen to yell like fury for American war supplies; not to appease us. He can yell alright, and that's a tone of voice we understand and don't resent, when it's well meant.

There's some talk to the purport that the Beaver may come over here to discuss his problems with us at short range, but that's a bit doubtful; he's due to be so busy at home.

A BIG HEADACHE

Whatever he gets the United States to produce for him will have to be transported to Britain. That'll be a headache for one E. J.

Leathers, a comparative unknown even in Britain, it's said. It's related that he's a first rate shipping and transport expert, though. The story is that the Beaver, rather than Winston, picked him up to handle the transportation job. We unquestionably will be getting acquainted with him, too. He'll be yowling as loudly for American ships as the Beaver will be yowling for war cargoes to put in 'em.

Originally he was from a nice by inconspicuous, very moderately circumstanced Canadian family. He started in life as a clothing store clerk in Calgary. Then he ran a pool room there. In due course, accumulating some savings, he broke into bigger business, effected a merger of several big cement companies and piled up considerable money. He'd always had an ambition to cop off a British peerage. So, taking his financial wad with him, he journeyed to London, as plain Max Aiken, bought a newspaper, made a howling success with it, and copped off the title he'd been yearning for since he was a kid in school.

Now look at him!—his lordship!—the Beaver!—economic dictator of the British empire!—darned nearly on a par with Prime Minister Winston Churchill!—higher up in the aristocracy than Winston himself, indeed!—negotiating on an equality with Bill Knudsen and Secretary Hull and President Roosevelt!—on the eve of saving the world from totalitarianism!—if he can—and all that!

Quite a performance for ordinary Max Aiken, former Calgary pool room proprietor, what?

Junior Societies Guests Of Presbyterian Women

Splendid Program Offered During Evening

The Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church delightfully entertained the two junior societies at a tea Friday in the social room of the church. The informal social affair followed the excellent program in which members of both societies, the Light Bearers and the Westminster Circle, participated.

Mrs. J. B. Stevenson, president, conducted the business session during which plans were discussed for sending delegates to the synodical meeting June 23 at Wooster. The delegates will be named later. It was also decided to help finance two or three delegates of high school age who will go to the Young People's conference in July.

The devotions were in charge of Mrs. E. S. Shane, leader of the Light Bearers, and were presented by two girls, Shirley Blake and Grace Stevenson. Mrs. Frederick Colville is leader of the Westminster Circle.

The two organizations offered an excellent playlet, "Living Waters," the scene being in Samaria. Dressed in the costumes of the country, the following girls took part in the play: Joan Downing, Elizabeth Downing, Betty Moeller, Mary Lou Koeheiser, Ann Moeller, Grace Stevenson, Elizabeth Stevenson, Margaret Stevenson, Marilyn Porter, Shirley Blake, Jane Sharp, Patty Howell, Donna Jean Howell, Mary Ellen Root and Jean Imier.

Mrs. E. A. Sharp read two very pleasing selections, "The Boy that was Scared of Dying," and a humorous one, "Noah's Remarkable Wife".

Mrs. Robert T. Kelsey presided at the attractive tea table when refreshments were served during the social hour.

A color theme of gold and blue was carried out in the water-garden comprised of coreopsis, gallardia and larkspur which formed the dainty centerpiece for the table.

Mrs. Walter Downing was in charge of the program for the affair.

Lemon Tea

About 75 members and guests of Circle 2, W.S.C.S. of the Methodist Church, enjoyed the unique "Lemon Tea" Friday at the home of Miss Mattie Gearhart, North Court Street. The silver offering of the successful affair was based on the number of seeds in the lemons taken to the tea by the guests.

Mrs. Charles Stoffer, Circle chairman, conducted the business hour which opened with scripture reading and prayer.

West Pointer Takes a Bride

Lieutenant Thomas and Mrs. Thomas—sealed by a kiss

As soon as he received his diploma and commission as a member of West Point's 1941 graduation class, Second Lieut. Arnold R. Thomas of Grass Creek, Ind., hurried to a highly important appointment at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Highland Falls, N. Y. The "appointment" was for his marriage to Miss Margaret V. Higgins. The wedding was the first among the new U. S. army officers.

Children's Little Theatre To Be Organized In City

Samuel R. Johnson, teacher of dramatics in Circleville High School, announced Saturday that a Children's Little Theatre would be formed in Circleville during the summer. Mr. Johnson made his announcement following a conference with N. C. Douglas, who has been directing Little Theatre movements throughout the nation.

The first step in the program will be to organize clubs according to the age of children who are interested, with a competent assistant in charge. Each club will have its own name, but will be under the direction of the Children's Little Theatre. Children from each club will be eligible for a membership after completing the preliminary work designated by the director. Each club will specialize in creative constructive dramatics and expression. They will also cover every phase of the theatre, such as, dramatization of plays, playwriting, stagecraft, scenery, make-up, and costume work.

The purpose of starting the Children's Little Theatre by grouped plan will bring trained children into such an organization. They will have an opportunity to put into practice the knowledge which they have gained and help other children who have been less fortunate along these lines.

All eligible children between the ages of six and sixteen will have an opportunity to enroll in one of the clubs that will be formed here as a branch of the main organization which has been successful throughout the United States and Canada. Those who have not already been contacted should get in touch with Mr. Johnson immediately, if they desire to participate in this educational activity.

Educators have been acquainted with the plan on which the clubs are conducted and have endorsed the movement as a means of encouraging good literature and as a special feature through which the children meet and mingle regularly for the purpose of mental advancement as well as social enjoyment.

At the end of the course each club will have the privilege of producing a play in which the children will take part, the proceeds to be donated to some worthy cause.

The first meeting will take place next week. A definite time and place will be announced later.

NEW ADDITIONS TO THE LIBRARY

EVOLUTION IN SCIENCE AND RELIGION, by R. A. Millikan.

Mr. Millikan reaches the conclusion that "modern science of the real sort is slowly learning to walk humbly with its God."

A review in the NEW YORK TIMES says of this book: "Written with notable clarity and simplicity . . . A very interesting, hopeful, and constructive exposition of the present day status and possible future of religion from the point of view of a scientist."

EARLY YEARS OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, by Kirby & Laurson.

In their preface, the authors state that they believe civil engineering students and engineers in general know little of the history of their profession or of the men of other days who made it. This volume aims to place emphasis upon modern developments and beginnings rather than give a complete history going back through thousands of years in which the skill and art of the profession was practiced. This profession, the authors believe, really started in the seventh century and took on life as a science during the eighteenth century. The first man to call himself a "civil engineer" was John Smeaton in 1761 and it is really from his day that the first formal definition of the new profession was advanced. The story is told in terms of the men themselves and only incidentally in terms of pioneer structures. Civil engineering, for purposes in this book, includes surveying, canals, highways, railroads, bridges, tunnels and subways, waterworks and water-power, sewers, river and harbor work.

THE WAR MEMOIRS, of David Lloyd George.

These two volumes of David Lloyd George's memoirs of the European war, 1914-1918, are for the years 1917-1918 only. They are interesting reading in the light of present day current events. The memoirs were finished in 1937 and contain much information although they are filled with venom. Mr. Lloyd George approves only Marshal Foch and General Bliss as military leaders. There is an excellent chapter on Clemenceau.

These memoirs are not, as might be suspected, dull ponderous tomes difficult through which to plow. On the contrary, they can be read for sheer pleasure. They are filled with the writer's vivid personality and each sentence and each thought is well-turned. Through out the books, Mr. Lloyd George says publicly what he thinks privately.

AMERICAN FICTION, 1920-1940, by J. W. Beach.

For the many people who enjoy and want to know more about the most recent American novels, this book offers a perfect introduction.

John D. Passos, Ernest Hemingway, William Faulkner, Erskine Caldwell, Thomas Wolfe, John Marquand, James Farrell, John Steinbeck are men whose work, in spite of its striking unorthodoxy, has won a permanent place for itself. With many shrewd observations, backed by his long experience, (He has been Professor of English in the University of Minnesota since 1924.) Professor Beach shows the place of these writers among the more conventional novelists of today. He explains what each of these eight men—revolutionaries in their different ways—is trying to do, and how each follows or revolts against tradition.

Junior Societies Guests Of Presbyterian Women

Splendid Program Offered During Evening

The Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church delightfully entertained the two junior societies at a tea Friday in the social room of the church. The informal social affair followed the excellent program in which members of both societies, the Light Bearers and the Westminster Circle, participated.

Mrs. J. B. Stevenson, president, conducted the business session during which plans were discussed for sending delegates to the synodical meeting June 23 at Wooster. The delegates will be named later. It was also decided to help finance two or three delegates of high school age who will go to the Young People's conference in July.

The devotions were in charge of Mrs. E. S. Shane, leader of the Light Bearers, and were presented by two girls, Shirley Blake and Grace Stevenson. Mrs. Frederick Colville is leader of the Westminster Circle.

The two organizations offered an excellent playlet, "Living Waters," the scene being in Samaria. Dressed in the costumes of the country, the following girls took part in the play: Joan Downing, Elizabeth Downing, Betty Moeller, Mary Lou Koechleiser, Ann Moeller, Grace Stevenson, Elizabeth Stevenson, Margaret Stevenson, Marilyn Porter, Shirley Blake, Jane Sharp, Patty Howell, Donna Jean Howell, Mary Ellen Root and Jean Imbler.

Mrs. E. A. Sharp read two very pleasing selections, "The Boy that was Scared of Dying," and a humorous one, "Noah's Remarkable Wife." Kelsey presided at the attractive tea table when refreshments were served during the social hour.

A color theme of gold and blue was carried out in the water-garden comprised of coreopsis, gallardia and larkspur which formed the dainty centerpiece for the table.

Mrs. Walter Downing was in charge of the program for the affair.

about 75 members and guests of Circle 2, W.S.C.S. of the Methodist Church, enjoyed the unique "Lemon Tea" Friday at the home of Miss Mattie Gearhart, North Court Street. The silver offering of the successful affair was based on the number of seeds in the lemons taken to the tea by the guests.

Mrs. Charles Stoffer, Circle chairman, conducted the business hour which opened with scripture reading and prayer.

The Flag Day program included

two readings, "Old Glory," by Mrs. F. E. Halderson, and "The Flag Goes By," Miss Carrie Johnson. Mrs. Noah G. Spangler discussed the correct use of the Flag. A profusion of June flowers made the home attractive for the occasion. Seasonal refreshments were served.

HOW ARE you at thinking of all the various factors which threaten to cause the defeat of your contract? If you think of most of them, but fail to take into account just some one dangerous possibility, that one thing may be the rock upon which your ship is wrecked. On many an occasion, the greatest players protect themselves against not only all the dangers which do exist, but against some which might exist but don't.

Today's Garden-Graph

To keep sweet peas blooming far into the summer, they require cultivation, feeding, watering, mulching. All blooms should be picked constantly. Under no circumstances allow any flowers to go to seed.

How to keep sweet peas blooming

Sweet peas need to be provided with a proper support to climb upon. As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, where the planting is small and somewhat protected from strong winds, brush with pointed ends can be stuck into the ground close to the plants. Do this when the plants are very small so as not to disturb the root growth later.

For a more pretentious planting, set stakes every eight feet and run wire or heavy string horizontally across, spacing into three or four divisions. Then hang the brush, but end up, over this. Chicken wire, which used to be popular, is banned, as the wires become so hot in midsummer the vines are injured by burning.

ALL KIWANIANS WILL OBSERVE ANNUAL PROJECT

Circleville Kiwanians will observe All-Kiwanis Week, June 15-21, joining with the 2,137 other Kiwanis clubs in the United States and Canada in a continent-wide observance stressing twenty-six years of service achievement.

"Our members are joining with the 113,000 other Kiwanians in the United States and Canada to observe this occasion," Card D. Bennett, club president, announced.

Kiwanis was founded in Detroit on January 21, 1915 and the celebration will concentrate attention on community service results.

"We are primarily a service club and our 113,000 Kiwanians are united to do a good job for their communities, states and nations," said Mark A. Smith, Macdon, Ga., president of Kiwanis International, in a special bulletin to the local club. "Service and concentration are the keynote of today. Our times call for self-denial, determination, thrift and a faith that right will win," he said.

The program for All-Kiwanis Week is to be in charge of the Kiwanis education committee. The club will take a pledge dedicating itself to the observance of Kiwanis principles, stressing the building of better communities, promotion of patriotic citizenship and emphasizing the value of enduring friendships.

The club meets Monday at 6:30 p. m. in Hanley's tearoom.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, June 14

DESPITE certain adverse aspects found in this day's horoscope there should be definite prospect of advancement, promotion, tokens of preferment, esteem and probably public recognition of importance. There may be delays, disappointments and impediments, with sudden disruption of plans and purposes, but these may be successfully coped with by determination, perseverance, optimism and the aid of those in high places.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of surprising advancement, success and personal gratification. This in spite of sudden and tenacious obstructions, disruptions, delays and disappointments, which resolutely and practically managed should lead to public notice, honors, esteem, promotion and other favors from those in influential positions. Be tactful and kindly.

A child born on this day should have all the elements of success, with talents, ambition and sound character to rise to signal achievement and public preferment over many reversals, handicaps and frustrations. Safeguard its health.

For Sunday, June 15

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds augury of an exceptionally lively day, with business interests as well as all social, personal, domestic and emotional interests moving at high tempo. All pertaining to the young, to travel, recreation, communications, writings and kindred matters should thrive. But there is danger from excess, extravagance, and a tax upon the good nature and generosity at the hands of too insistent or dubious friends. Be circumspect in all associations.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a swift moving year, with much liveliness and excitement in all phases of life, private as well as business. It may be a time for forging ahead in all pertaining to writings, publishing, promotion, travel and affairs of youth, while at the same time putting the brakes on in the way of expenditures, outlay, indulgence and excessive generosity. Doubtful friends may be costly, particularly where social, sentimental or even domestic demands may be excessive. In all relations use discretion and restraints. Choose wisely.

A child born on this day may be generous, indulgent, cordial and hospitable to an unwarranted degree, carried away by its kindly impulses as well as importunities of so-called friends.

RULES FOR REGISTRATION OF 21 YEAR OLD YOUTHS BEING DRAWN

LOCAL OFFICES TO BE USED IN NEXT SIGN-UP

State Director Lists All Who Are Exempt From Draft Service

With the registration of all young men who have reached the age of 21 since last October 16 scheduled to be held at the local draft board office in two weeks, Selective Service officials Saturday were clearing their June quotas and preparing for the July 1 registration.

The local board estimates that 150 young men in the county will be affected by the registration. The registration probably will be held at the draft board office or in the Common Pleas Court room of the Court House. State Selective Service officials have announced that special registrars will be provided to register those men who cannot appear before their local boards because of illness or other incapacity.

Every man in the State who has attained the 21st anniversary of the day of his birth subsequent to October 16, 1940, and before midnight, July 1, 1941—with a few specific exceptions made by Congress—must register on July 1.

Aliens, as well as American citizens, who are 21 years old on July 1 must be registered, and aliens between the ages of 21 and 36 years, who have come to the United States since the first registration on October 16, 1940, and have not registered must appear before local boards on July 1 to register.

Quoting from Selective Service regulations, State Selective Service Director, Col. C. W. Goble pointed out that the exemptions from registration as provided by the elective Training and Service Act and the Coast Guard Auxiliary and Reserve Act of 1941 are:

QUESTION: Will you kindly inform me what will kill grass and small weeds growing between the joints of a brick walk? It is laid in two inches of sand with the bricks close together. I read in the local newspaper that a poison called sodium arsenite or sodium chlorate would kill plants. If so, in what proportions can it be used successfully? J. F. C., Cincinnati.

ANSWER: In my own brick terrace in the rear of my home and in the patch stone walk from my house to the street I find it is a simple matter to kill the weeds by getting some cheap table salt and sprinkling it along cracks. This is easy and inexpensive. Care must be taken, however, not to get it on the grass or other plants on either side of the walk. I would not recommend the use of stronger materials such as sodium chlorate because of the fire hazard involved in its use. Neither is it necessary to use a poison such as sodium arsenite.

QUESTION: I have recently purchased a home in a rural community with 3 1/2 acres attached. I was informed that sometimes the University arranges for a study of landscaping in a situation of this kind. Would you please inform me if such a service is available? R. W. L., Cincinnati.

ANSWER: It is impossible for the University to furnish free landscape plans to either farm or town properties. We do, however, in a number of counties where there is sufficient interest, hold home landscaping schools where we attempt to teach the folks how to develop their own landscape plan. Other than this may I suggest that you obtain the service of a local landscape architect or landscape gardener. You will find that if you are doing any amount of planting whatsoever you will more than save yourself the cost of their services.

QUESTION: Last fall I started some roses by slipping, putting them under glass. They have a nice start now, one of them has budded. What I want to know is when I should take the glass off them. Mrs. O. D. W., Harrisville.

ANSWER: These glasses protecting the young rose plants should have been removed earlier this spring. However, you can remove them now. It may be necessary, though, to shade them slightly since with the high temperatures we have been having and the tenderness of the foliage underneath the glass, the new leaves may be severely sunburned unless they are gradually hardened.

QUESTION: You will find inclosed the top leaves from my phlox. As you can see, something has apparently stung the stem just under the second or third pair of leaves, causing it to wilt and die. A. L. K., Springfield.

ANSWER: This damage is quite common in some gardens, being caused by the phlox plant bug.

State Director Lists All Who Are Exempt From Draft Service

With the registration of all young men who have reached the age of 21 since last October 16 scheduled to be held at the local draft board office in two weeks, Selective Service officials Saturday were clearing their June quotas and preparing for the July 1 registration.

The local board estimates that 150 young men in the county will be affected by the registration. The registration probably will be held at the draft board office or in the Common Pleas Court room of the Court House. State Selective Service officials have announced that special registrars will be provided to register those men who cannot appear before their local boards because of illness or other incapacity.

Aliens, as well as American citizens, who are 21 years old on July 1 must be registered, and aliens between the ages of 21 and 36 years, who have come to the United States since the first registration on October 16, 1940, and have not registered must appear before local boards on July 1 to register.

Levy May Be Considered
Only issue which is expected to come before Circleville voters in the primary election is the 1½ mill operating levy being considered by the council. Election officials, however, are questioning the validity of bringing such an issue before the voters at a primary election and at present are awaiting a ruling from the attorney general before definitely announcing the operating levy as an issue in the primary. Should the attorney general rule that the levy cannot be placed on the primary ballot, the issue probably will be brought up at the general election.

The levy, according to a resolution adopted by the council on its June 4 meeting, will produce about $10,000 annually, it is believed, or about $50,000 over a period of three years. City officials estimate that the levy, if passed, would provide the general fund with sufficient revenue for current operating expenses during the next three years.
